CREEK MAY CAUSE BIG EXPENDITURE

Gettysburg's Sewer System, Maintained under State Regulations, May Require an Annual Outlay of Seven Hundred Dollars.

Ivan M. Glace, representing the State Department of Health, visited Gettysburg Monday afternoon to consult with the sewer committee of the town council relative to the condition of Rock Creek and measures to be taken for its abatement.

Mr. Glace inspected carefully both of the large septic tanks at the terminus of the town's sewer system and ordered them cleaned thoroughly at once. Lack of attention has caused them to get in a very unsanitary condition and quick measures will be taken to have them thoroughly cleaned. Daily applications will be made to the sewage as it enters these tanks so that the condition may be permanently abated.

For this purpose the State Department of Health recommends the use of hypochlorite of lime and states that one hundred pounds should be used every day. The cost of this material is two cents a pound so that the daily expenditure to the borough, exclusive of the cost of application, will be $2.00, or over $700 a year.

Mr. Beard, of the sewer committee, told the State's representative that the town council felt such application would only be necessary during the period of the year when the water in Rock Creek is low or during about three of the summer months. Mr. Glace said it was his idea that the State had put in the apparatus there for constant use to be applied daily every month, no matter what the condition of the stream.

Further attention will be given this in a consultation with Dr. Samuel G. Dixon, State Health Commissioner, and an effort will be made to bring to the lowest possible figure the cost of operating the plant.

MARKET BREAKS FORMER RECORDS

Sixty Eight Wagons Surround Curb on Centre Square, Displaying Every Sort of Fruit and Vegetable now in Season.

No vestige of doubt remains in the minds of those who attended this morning's curb market concerning its place among Gettysburg's established institutions. Sixty-eight wagons, containing every kind of vegetable and fruit grown in this section, testified to its success with the country people and the horde of householders who bought more than a thousand dollars worth of produce plainly showed its popularity with the town people.

Chief of Police Emmons, who also holds the position of market-master and who has been assiduous in his attention to the conduct of the market since his appointment this spring, was especially elated at this morning's showing. According to his records today's attendance exceeded that of any other morning since the establishment of the curb market. Last year the revenue for the borough was less than fifteen dollars over the amount expended for its maintenance, while the receipts to the present time for this year show a balance in excess of seventy-five dollars that will be turned into the borough treasury. The fees from stall holders for the month of August alone amounted to $48.80.

The sight of wagons occupying all the available curb space around the Square and extending on to Baltimore street produced expressions of amazement this morning from visitors. A party of tourists who arrived on the early express over the Western Maryland carefully inspected this showing of Adams County products before they proceeded to their hotel, and were liberal in their praise of the quality of goods offered for sale.

One remarkable feature of the large market was that the quantity did not seem to depress the sales. Few stallholders failed to dispose of the larger part of their offerings. Several of the men interviewed said they had sold more than twenty five dollars worth of products and all of them appeared satisfied with the way things were going.

CAMPAIGN FOR THE PLAYGROUND

Will Ask Popular Subscriptions to Meet Cost of Maintaining the Place, Paying Director of Sports and Meeting Other Expenses.

At a meeting of the Kurtz Playground Association on Monday evening it was decided to launch a campaign to secure funds for the maintenance of the big outdoor amusement place for the children of Gettysburg. Subscriptions will be asked from the people of town to meet the expense required for the proper conduct and up-keep of the place.

Just now the board of directors having things in charge, are unable to state what the annual expenses are likely to be. Mr. Leathers, who was the director for the summer months, has resigned and there will be no director appointed until next spring, with the result that the salary of such employee will not have to be met. It is proposed to effect some agreement with the town school board by which the janitor of the High Street school building will also be janitor at the playground, and it is believed considerable money can be saved in this way.

Cards will be prepared for the subscriptions and they will be generally distributed in the town so that all who wish may have a chance to contribute. The revenue from this source will, it is understood, be increased by the proceeds of entertainments and other means of raising additional funds.

Mr. Leathers left Gettysburg today to spend a short time at his home in Renovo before taking charge of the athletic work at Salisbury Preparatory School, Salisbury, Connecticut. He has been a resident of Gettysburg for more than five years, having spent four years in college, one as a teacher in the Prep and this summer as playground director.

Not wishing to leave the place without a caretaker the Playground Association Monday evening decided to offer Mr. and Mrs. Harold Strickhouser, free rent, light, heat and water if they will occupy the lodge and care for the grounds during the fall and winter months. Mr. Strickhouser is at present employed at one of the furniture factories and his position at the playground would not interfere with that occupation. It is understood that he will accept the offer.

Mr. Kurtz has a number of changes in view for the playground but the stress of business, in view of European conditions, has made it impossible for him to leave Philadelphia. He expects to come here either the latter part of this week or the beginning of next week when he will decide definitely on the further plans for the place.

PREPARE FOR THE POULTRY EXHIBIT

Biglerville Board of Directors Expect More Entries than Last Year. Add Grains and will Give Cash Prizes. Other Plans.

The board of directors of the Biglerville Agricultural, Horticultural and Poultry Association met on Monday evening to make arrangements for the annual show at Biglerville on December 1, 2, 3 and 4.

Realizing that the growth of the show, apparent last year, will continue, the directors decided to use more than one building to exhibit the poultry. The main building last year which was used for chickens, turkeys, pigeons, ducks and other poultry will again be used for that purpose and another building provided for the overflow. C. C. Cornman, of Carlisle, who was the judge both last year and the year preceding, has again been secured for this year.

Apples this year will be exhibited only on plates, and the boxed apple exhibit will be abandoned. It is believed that, by featuring the plate display, from seven hundred to eight hundred plates of the country's finest fruit can be secured. The judge for the apples has not yet been announced.

More of a feature will be made of the grain exhibits this fall. The list will include wheat, oats, rye, barley, corn, sweet corn, clover seed, timothy and buckwheat, and cash prizes will be offered in all classes.

The premiums for poultry, fruit and grains will all be attractive enough to draw large entries, it is believed, and the show this year, at this early date, promises exceedingly well. The list of premiums is to be published in the very near future with a prospectus which the association is now preparing to issue.

CASHTOWN

Cashtown—The fine rains of last week have improved the corn and all the fall crops wonderfully, and put the ground in fine condition for the farmers to plough.

The school directors of Franklin township have elected Jacob Dearth as their truancy officer, and have given him instructions to enforce strictly the compulsory school attendance law. Sickness will be the only excuse taken for a pupil failing to attend the full term of ninety eight days. The directors have taken this measure so that there may be no difficulty about securing the State appropriation.

H. A. Bucher has sold his property in this place to his brother and has started to dig out a foundation on his farm above town where he intends to complete a new house and move in, April first.

The plasterers are putting the last coat of "mud" on the Hall. The painters are busy painting the exterior and, if everything goes along as expected, the building will be finished and ready for dedication this fall.

The peach crop through this section was a good one and the growers disposed of the fruit to advantage. A fair apple crop is also expected but it is believed the prices will be lower than last year.

Eli Hahn, of Five Forks, Franklin county, spent a short time in this place after attending the funeral of his brother-in-law, Jacob Shultz.

ALLIES GIVE WAY ON ROAD TO PARIS

Germans Hurl Back French Wing.

INVADERS PUSH ON

Kaiser's Troops Now Within 60 Miles of Paris.

BIG BATTLE IS RAGING

The Teuton War Machine Moves Against Fortified Positions.

Paris, Sept. 1.—An official statement issued by the war office said in effect that the French troops on the right have again taken the offensive and are driving the Germans back.

On the left the allies were obliged to yield, according to the official announcement, because of a series of circumstances which turned in favor of the Germans.

The official statement, in full, is as follows:

"First. In the Vosges and Lorraine our forces which took up the offensive in those districts from the very start of the operations and have been repulsing the enemy to beyond our frontiers, have finally experienced a serious check before Mortain, where they ran into very strong defensive operations.

"These troops of ours had to retire to reconstitute their formations, some going to the fortified region around Nancy and some into the French Vosges. The Germans took up the offensive, but our troops, after pushing the enemy's attacks back on her already organized rear positions, were able again to take up their attack two days ago. This attack has not ceased to make progress, though slowly.

"It is a veritable siege of war that is going on in this region. Every position occupied is immediately organized on all sides, which accounts for the slowness of our advance, which nevertheless is characterized by new local successes daily.

"Second. In regard to the region of Nancy and southern Meuse: Since the beginning of the campaign this region from fortified Metz to the fortresses of Toul and Verdun has not been the theater of any important action.

French Forced to Retreat.

Along the Meuse region between Verdun and Metz: The French initially assumed the offensive toward Longwy, Neufchateau and Hallsel. Our troops operating around Spincourt and Longuyon checked the enemy, notably the crown prince's army. On the contrary, around Neufchateau and Hallsel some of our troops suffered partial checks which forced them to fall back on the Meuse, but without suffering any disorganization. This retreat obliged our forces which were operating around Spincourt to retreat also toward the Meuse. During the last few days the enemy sought to break through from the Meuse with considerable forces, but was driven back to the river with heavy losses by our vigorous counter offensive. However, new German forces advanced by way of the Rocroi region, marching toward Rethel. At the present moment a general engagement is under way in the region between the Meuse and Rethel, but it is impossible to foresee its definite results.

"Fourth. The operations in the north: The French and English forces initially advanced into the Sliment-Charleroi-Mons country. Several partial checks were experienced in the forcing of the Meuse by the Germans, and around Givet, on our flank, they forced our troops to retreat. The Germans were seeking always to overflow us at the west.

Big Battle Raging.

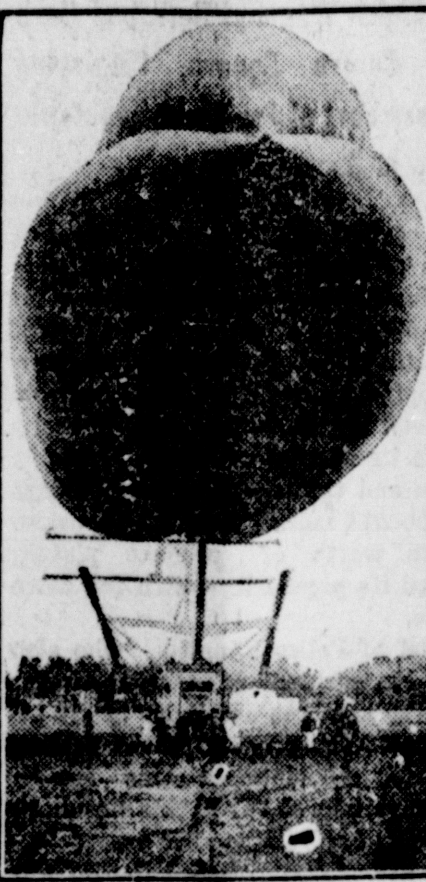

"It was under these conditions that our English allies, attacked by very superior numbers around Lecateau and Cambrai, had to retreat south at the moment when we had operated around Avesnes and Chimay. The retreat continued during several following days. However, a general battle was begun on Friday in the region of St. Quentin and Vervins at the same time as in the region around Ham and Peronne. This battle was marked for us by an important success at our right, where we repulsed the Prussian guard and the Tenth German corps to the Oise. But on the contrary, and always by reason of the German right wing, where the enemy has collected its best army corps, we have had to make another movement of retreat.

"To sum up, at our right, after partial checks, we have taken the offensive and the enemy is retreating before us. At the center we have had alternating checks and successes, but a general battle is again in progress there, whereas at our left, through a series of circumstances favorable to the Germans and even despite our fortunate counter attacks, the French and English forces have been compelled to give way and yield ground. At no place, so far, have our armies, despite several incontestable reverses, been really demoralized. The morale of our troops remains excellent despite the heavy losses suffered, which have been made up by reinforcements from the army centers, which have stopped up all holes in the ranks."

Germans Sixty Miles From Paris.

According to a report the allied forces again have been compelled to fall back before the German advance in the neighborhood of La Fere, which is over twenty miles nearer to Paris than the Cambrai-Lecateau line, where the allies reorganized after the Germans crossed the French border. Severe fighting is also reported in the vicinity of Amiens.

La Fere is only a little more than sixty miles from Paris as the crow flies.

The German troops that pushed into France between the Meuse and Moselle rivers are driving forward against that section of the allied line of defense in the northern part of the department of Ardennes.

The army under Crown Prince Frederick William and the army under General von Kluck and General von Hausen are trying to cut their way through the French line with the object of forming a junction.

MEN BEING RUSHED INTO PARIS FORTS

Garrisons Reinforced While Thousands Leave City.

Paris, Sept. 1.—All night long troops from the south and west of France have been arriving at the capital and passing by rail around the city to the locations to the encircling fortifications to which they have been assigned.

There is great activity on the part of the municipal military administration in completing the details of the plans for the defense of Paris.

The unusual animation to be noticed on the streets of Paris was caused chiefly by the thousands of persons who are preparing to leave the capital.

Persons are departing and taking their families with them as a matter of prudence. It is felt that the fewer the number of non-combatants in the city the better.

Japanese Vessel Eludes Cruiser.

San Francisco, Sept. 1.—The Japanese liner Chiyio Maru, which arrived here, reports that on the night of Aug. 29 she was chased for four hours by a German cruiser, but escaped by crowding on all speed. The cruiser appeared from the rear about 8.30 p. m. and threw a bomb from her search light on the Chiyio's stern. Captain Green, who is a British officer in command, detailed an extra force of stokers and soon was making twenty-one knots.

Britain Lands More Troops.

London, Sept. 1.—Large numbers of English troops were landed secretly at Ostend during the night, says a dispatch received here from Antwerp. These troops marched through the town in a southerly direction. According to the report the landing of the troops took place under cover of darkness.

CONCLAVE OPENS TO ELECT POPE

Cardinal Farley is the Only American There.

MOURNING IS ENDED

That the New Pope Will Be an Italian Is Regarded as Almost a Certainty.

Rome, Sept. 1.—The conclave of cardinals to elect a successor of Pope Pius X., who died on Aug. 20, was inaugurated with imposing ceremony. Mass was celebrated in the Pauline Chapel in the presence of fifty-seven cardinals and their clavigers.

There were present also members of the diplomatic corps, the Knights of Malta and the aristocracy of the papal court, which for the first time since Aug. 29, appeared without mourning dress.

The Sistine choir sang the middle mass and Monsignor Massella delivered in Latin an oration concerning the election of a pontiff.

Cardinal Farley, of New York, was the only one of the three distinctly American cardinals present when the religious services were begun.

Cardinal Gibbons and Cardinal O'Connell, who are coming from the United States, are expected tomorrow. Virtually all foreign cardinals had arrived when the conclave was formally opened.

The old Roman proverb that the man entering the conclave expecting to be pope leaves as a cardinal is being recalled as the cardinals meet.

The Patriarch of Venice himself neither sought nor expected the election in 1903, and his successor may quite as likely be found outside those who have been most talked of as the next pope.

That he will be an Italian has been regarded as almost a certainty, for the state of affairs throughout Europe is said to make it more desirable than ever that the church should not part from its traditions.

But there is, from the American side, a possibility that the tradition might still be maintained, and at the same time an American citizen be elevated to St. Peter's throne.

This would be in the case of the election of Dionese Falconio, Italian by birth, who was for many years a missionary in America and then papal delegate to the United States, and who became a naturalized American citizen during his residence abroad.

Cardinal Falconio is, however, only one of several logical candidates and only one of many possibilities.

There is little doubt, if any authorization, for speculating on the chances of the many candidates. Following are some of the names that have been mentioned: Cardinal Vannutelli, Cardinal Martinielli, Cardinal Aglardi, Cardinal Gotti, Cardinal Gasparri, Cardinal Momi and Cardinal Penata.

OBJECT TO SHIP BILL

Britain and France Protest Against Purchase of German Liners.

Washington, Sept. 1.—Great Britain has joined with France in objecting to the purchase by the United States of any German liners in connection with the plan to build up an American merchant marine.

At first England hesitated to protest, believing her action might be interpreted as placing obstacles in the way of a resumption of commerce to England.

After France had communicated her viewpoint to London, however, the British foreign office decided to urge the American government to buy neutral vessels to avoid complications.

"No formal protest has been lodged by either France or Great Britain, but the situation has been lined to the Washington government as of momentous importance to both countries.

France takes the view that the purchase of German liners now tied up in ports would be tantamount to giving Germany important financial assistance. England's position is that there is no precedent in international law for the purchase of a large number of ships during war from a belligerent nation.

Belgian Queen Leaves For London.

London, Sept. 1.—An official telegram from Antwerp says the queen of the Belgians left for London, accompanied by her children. When a German airship dropped bombs on Antwerp some days ago it is claimed that they were aimed at the royal palace, where the queen and her children were residing. King Albert was at the front with his troops.

Austrian Defeat Reported.

Cettigne, Sept. 1.—A defeat of 5000 Austrians, with 450 killed and many taken prisoners, when they attacked the Montenegrin position on Mount Lovtchen, was announced by the Montenegrin government. It was also stated that Austrians attempted to recapture the towns of Sudua and Spizza, but lost heavily and fled on the appearance of the French fleet.

Ottawa Discounts U. S. Money.

Ottawa, Can., Sept. 1.—The Bank of Toronto refused to accept American money except at a discount of 2 1/2 per cent, and the hotels have followed suit.

Original Meaning of "Jovial."

Jovial once meant the type of character supposed to belong to all persons who were born when the planet Jupiter or Jove, was in the ascendant. They were supposed to possess more of the cheerful elements of character than others, and hence to partake of the benign qualities attributed to the father of the gods.

"Sabotage"

Sabotage has been defined as "striking but staying on the payroll." It is the means taken by discontented workmen to interfere with the machinery of their employer's production, and if possible to force him to consider their demands without actually going on strike. Briefly, sabotage means poor work, done deliberately, with the definite purpose of causing the greatest possible annoyance to the employer.

SPIES SWARM UNITED STATES

Particularly Numerous In Six Large Cities.

WASHINGTON HARBORS MANY

Come From Germany, Japan, Russia, France, England and Austria—Keep Watch to See We Observe Neutrality Laws—Seek Destination of Exports and Public Sentiment in America.

"Some of the cleverest spies in all the world are now in the United States. They come here from Russia, Germany, France, Japan, England and Austria. They are particularly numerous in New York, Philadelphia, Washington, Boston, New Orleans and San Francisco."

This statement was made to the Philadelphia Press by a man high in the United States navy, whose international knowledge has been recognized by the navy department.

"I have upon my ship," the speaker said, "two spies who are known to me. One is a Japanese; the other is a Frenchman. I know they are spies, but they don't know that I know it. Apparently they are allowed the freedom of the ship, but their every movement on board and ashore is watched."

"Washington is overrun with spies. Much of the agitation for and against the proposed $40,000,000 investment in foreign ships is being pushed along by these secret agents. Representatives of Germany and Austria are working to create sentiment for the purchase of the ships, and the French, English and Russian spies are working against it."

Many of Them Are Women.

"So numerous are these spies that you may meet one or more in any walk you may take up and down Chestnut street, Philadelphia. A considerable number of women, most of them young and attractive, are among these secret agents."

"These spies are everywhere, and their work is manifold. Their duty is to learn the destination of every shipment that goes outside of the United States. They are scanning especially closely the shipments into Mexico and Canada. More closely they are watching the shipments of sugar, which substance is being used in the manufacture of the new high explosives."

"Secret reports are being made by these men and women to the bureaus in Berlin, London, Tokyo, St. Petersburg, Vienna and Paris concerning the attitude of American public men, newspapers and the plain citizens upon various phases of the war."

Early Bidders For Food Supplies. "Many of these spies succeeded in making many advantageous arrangements for their governments the day before and on the day war was declared. I know of a number of instances where men who sell foodstuffs were called out of bed late at night and asked if they could supply large quantities of provisions."

"One man told me he had been asked by the representative of one of the governments whether he could furnish a large supply of bacon. He replied in the affirmative and was told to have 20,000 pounds ready in six hours. This was done, and the bacon was shipped in two special cars to Canada, whence I was told it had been reshipped to a country now in the war zone."

The officer also said a large number of the spies were here to watch the United States and to see that the neutrality laws were not violated. He said it was surprising how many of these men were to be found at points where shipments would naturally be made from his country to a European power and added that there was no doubt that the first false step made by this country or any of its citizens would be reported abroad at once.

WAS FIRST LINER DE LUXE.

Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse Suits Cost $1,000—Later Prices Reached $5,000.

The Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, which at the outbreak of war was converted into an armed cruiser and which was sunk off the west coast of Africa by the British cruiser High Flyer, was built in 1897 at a cost of between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000. She was 626 feet long, 66 feet beam and 14,350 gross tonnage. She had an average speed of twenty-three knots and, according to the Naval Annual, she was fitted to carry an armament of eight 5.9 guns, four 4.7 guns and fourteen machine guns.

The liner was the first vessel to have suites de luxe, consisting of parlor, bedroom and bath, costing $1,000 for the passage. The innovation proved a great success, and the succeeding liners ran the price up to $2,000 and continued after that until the limit was reached with the $5,000 Imperial suits on the Vaterland and the Imperator.

Watchful Waiting.

Refugees arriving from Ostend by way of Folkestone told of one of their number, a complicit Frenchman, who, as soon as the boat left the wharf at Ostend, took off his coat, vest and boots and, putting on a life preserver, sat down on the edge of the deck, continuing the whole trip in this costume. Asked what he meant by such behavior, he replied in just one eloquent word, "Mines!"

Odd. It is odd that the man who speaks without thinking is the one most apt to say what he thinks.

PEACE

The alarms of war let us forget. Here from this pine spired hill Look on the yellowing fields of maize, Past where the languid cattle graze, On where the autumn's sunshot haze Silvers the serpent rill.

The alarms of war let us forget. A moment if no more. Look on the blue-gray smoke that curls Up from the homes of rustic churls, Far from the acid, eddying whirls, And the hate charged cannon's roar.

The alarms of war let us forget. As the sun goes down the slope, As the crickets shrill in the dusk so still, As the waters dream by the silent mill, And a whisper comes from the moonlit hill— This is a whole world's hope! —Stephen Chalmers in New York Times.

READY TO HONOR THE FLAG AT GREAT CELEBRATION.

Plans Perfected For Centennial of "The Star Spangled Banner."

In commemoration of the events that surrounded the birth of "The Star Spangled Banner," the national anthem, a great patriotic celebration is to take place at Baltimore Sept. 6 to 13, inclusive.

Baltimore will entertain thousands of visitors during the centennial week. President Wilson and former Presidents Taft and Roosevelt head the list of distinguished guests. All the governors and the mayors of every city of 5,000 or more inhabitants have been invited by Mayor Preston, president of the national star spangled banner centennial commission.

Sept. 7, industrial day, the Constellation, oldest of the vessels now in the United States navy, will sail into the harbor, accompanied by American warships.

Sept. 8, Francis Scott Key day, will be marked by a floral automobile parade, the Maryland tournament, a great street carnival and other attractions. On Sept. 9 there will be a parade of 60,000 strong of members of fraternal orders. Sept. 10 will be municipal day, for which Baltimore has planned many local features. On Sept. 11, army and navy day, thousands of regulars, sailors and militia, with veteran organizations, will parade.

On Sept. 12 the original star spangled banner, which is now in the National museum, Washington, will be borne through the streets of Baltimore to Fort McHenry, the escort consisting of the president, many governors and mayors and a picked guard of 100 men from each of the states in the Union in 1814. Fort McHenry will be dedicated as a public park, with an address by President Wilson, and 6,000 children will sing the national anthem.

The celebration will end Sept. 13, Peace day, when peace will be the theme in all pulpits of Baltimore.

PERFECT SHOES FOR ARMY.

New Footgear Evolved After Year of Experiments.

A nation wide shoemaking contest has just been brought to a close by the awarding of two army contracts to the winners.

"Next to the quality of the gun he carries," said one of these army experts, "more depends upon the condition of the shoe he wears than upon any other factor that goes toward the makeup of an effective soldier."

It took more than a year of experiment to obtain satisfactory results. Countless X ray photographs were made, the position of the bones of the feet were noted and the anatomy before, during and after marches were studied and compared. All this time different models were tried and theories were worked out. Finally the type of shoe was evolved with its straight line on the big toe side, its snug instep and a chance for the toes to lie as freely and naturally as in a moccasin.

A USE FOR VICE PRESIDENTS.

Even After One Goes Out of Office His Name May Work Wonders.

L. O. Hartman of Chicago, an agent for the Foreign Missions society of the Methodist Episcopal church, who returned to America on the liner Principe di Udine, brought back an amusing story illustrating how well known our vice presidents are in foreign countries.

"We had an awful time getting from Semlin, Hungary, to Vienna. At one place I was held under suspicion of being a spy. I had an old letter of introduction written by Mr. Fairbanks of Indiana when he was vice president. A young officer of the Austrian army read the letter and became voluble."

"Ah," he said, "this is your vice president—a great man. I have heard of him."

"He gave me a pass, which got me through the country."

"DON'TS" FOR WAR REFUGEES.

American Publication in London Warns Against Worry.

The American Bulletin, a London paper published for American refugees, contains this list of "don'ts":

"Don't worry. To do so is to annoy yourself and, what is more important, others."

"Don't grab a stateroom for four when there are but two in your party."

"Don't forget that riches and a sense of comfort depend on what you know how to do without."

FLOATING FOES OF BATTLESHIPS

Contact Mines Sure to Play Big Part in the War.

TWO TYPES, ONE HARMLESS

But Evidently the Powers Are Not Planting the Latter, Which Are Set Off by Electricity From Shore Stations—Germans Employed This Coast Defense in 1870.

The submarine mine is going to play a big part in the present terrible struggle in Europe before peace is re-established, says a writer in the New York Sun. Probably it will cause more havoc than it did during the Russo-Japanese war, when ship after ship was struck below the water line and sent to the bottom of the sea.

The Germans were busy mining a part of the open sea off their coast when the Koenig Luise was caught and red-handed by a British flotilla of destroyers and shot to pieces. However, the Kaiser's mine layer had already sown the seed of disaster.

The flagship of the flotilla, the scout cruiser Amphion, went confidently on and in time turned and headed back toward the English coast. Suddenly the little cruiser plunged like a stricken horse and shook violently as she hit one of the German electro contact mines. Instantly there was an awful explosion, and the expanding gases from the mine literally tore the craft in two as they rushed upward.

Great Britain has now determined to plant contact mines in offshore navigable waters, and it is credibly reported that Austria, Russia and France have done likewise.

To the peace lover this menace to peaceful shipping is woefully shocking, and yet it is substantially in keeping with an international agreement entered into at The Hague after the last conflict in the far east.

Germany Profits by Experience.

The Germans are not new at this form of coast defense and in their present campaign are profiting by earlier experiences. The moral effect of submarine mines was amply demonstrated during the Franco-Prussian war of 1870-1. Then the Teutons defended their principal harbors and estuaries in the Baltic and in the North sea by means of mechanical and electro-mechanical mines. The former contained from 80 to 100 pounds of gunpowder and the latter about 200 pounds of an explosive called dualine.

During that war no opportunities occurred to test the efficiency of these mines, as the mere fact of their presence prevented the French fleet from undertaking naval operations on any scale. But on raising their mine field the Germans lost a large number of lives because of unexpected explosions.

There are two types of contact mines. The first are planted in approaches to harbors and channels and of necessity must be rendered harmless except when the foe is approaching. These mines are controlled from a shore station, inasmuch as they are inoperative unless current is fed to them from an electrical power station ashore. No matter how they may be ordinarily bumped into by passing craft—within some reasonable limits—they are substantially inert until the current from the shore station is switched on. Plainly this is not the sort of electro contact mine which the powers are now planting in the open sea and far from any base of control. Once planted and after a definite interval they become "alive" and will explode the moment a craft tilts them over a prescribed number of degrees.

Most of the submarine mines operate on the same principle, the difference lying in the day that each power chooses to make the mine active when struck.

Wet Gun cotton Formerly Used.

Until recently all of them were charged with wet gun cotton, which was hammered or detonated by the blow caused by a small charge of dry gun cotton and this in turn set off by a little capsule filled with fulminate of mercury, a chemical capable of exploding with extreme violence. Fulminate of mercury can be ignited by electricity. Other explosives also are now used. Japan employs melinite. Russia has used pyroxylin, and latterly other countries have taken up trinitrotoluol, which has a greater bursting violence than gun cotton and possesses qualities of stability in a chemical sense.

The contact mine, unlike the larger observation mine which is deliberately fired from the shore, does its damage when actually against the ship to be hurt, and therefore it is not necessary to use the same quantity of explosive as when the injury is to be inflicted from some distance. Now, if contact mines are too heavily charged and too close together the explosion of one may detonate the other and thus in turn needlessly set off a whole mine field. Again, the wider the space between mines the greater is the chance of the enemy slipping through. Therefore to make a whole field effective against an approaching fleet and to prevent a single vessel from exploding the entire group—a sacrifice that any determined enemy would willingly make—it is useful to limit the charge of the contact mine so that its reverberations when detonated will not affect its neighbors.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

HUCKLEBERRIES IN PASTRY.

Huckleberries are a fruit that is very indigestible served raw. Cooked huckleberries are delicious and wholesome. They are excellent in pies and pastries. Huckleberry turnovers are made the same as apple turnovers, using huckleberries instead of apples and omitting the cinnamon.

Huckleberry Cake.—Cream a cupful of sugar and a tablespoonful of butter, add an unbeaten egg and mix thoroughly. Add a cupful of milk and two and a half cupfuls of flour sifted with three tablespoonfuls of baking powder, then a pinch of nutmeg and stir in lightly three cupfuls of blueberries. Turn into buttered pans and bake for thirty-five minutes in a hot oven.

Served With Milk.

Huckleberry Float.—Take a cupful of huckleberries, three tablespoonfuls of sugar, a cupful of flour, a teaspoonful of baking powder, a teaspoonful of shortening, a quarter teaspoonful of salt and half a cupful of milk. Pick and wash the berries, put in small saucepan with half a cupful of water bring to boil quickly, add the sugar and boil five minutes. Sift the flour, add the shortening and rub in very lightly adding milk slowly. Take up a spoonful and form into round balls, place on floured pie tin, brush with cold milk and bake twelve minutes in hot oven. While warm break in half, put in glass bowl and pour over the huckleberries. Serve at once. You can put a little butter on each biscuit if you like. This makes enough for four persons.

Hints For Pie.

Huckleberry Pie.—Add a spoonful of vinegar to the fruit when making pie—a tablespoonful may be needed, but no more. This amount will not be enough to modify the extreme saccharine quality. A few currants, if conveniently at hand, may be put in to impart "tang" to the pie. In this case the vinegar should be left out. Brush the lower crust before covering it with the fruit with a small quantity of egg white. Sprinkle the berries lightly with flour. Too much will make the filling pasty. Only enough to prevent the juice from running should be used. When the pie is taken from the oven sprinkle the top with powdered sugar.

PUZZLES TO THE BLIND.

Lack of "Size Sense" Gives Them Odd Ideas About Animals.

The path of the teacher of the blind is beset with many difficulties, one of the greatest being the task of conveying to their mind some idea of the size, shape and features of birds and animals. In many cases, it is true, models are used, but owing to their small size they are, to say the least, of doubtful advantage.

The ignorance of blind children is great, often grotesque. A teacher of a class may find that a child does not know whether a sheep or a cow is the larger, or he may even find that a hare has wings. However carefully they are told that a small model of a cow is only one-fortieth the size of the real animal, more often than not they are unable to think of the animal as being any larger than the model and will stoop and describe something about the size of a kitten when asked to indicate the size of a cow. This arises from the fact that no standard of size, form and texture—beyond those which they set up through handling—can exist for those who have never had the use of their eyes.

Even those who have had sight are found to lose their standards unless they are renewed from time to time by actual contact. An instance of this was noticed not long ago when a boy of about twelve recovered his sight after an operation and for several days following went about in a state of surprise and fear, for almost every thing which he had not been in the habit of touching frequently differed considerably in size from his recollections of seven years before. The size of his parents alarmed him very much as he imagined they were much smaller.—Strand Magazine.

Montreal Churches.

Montreal is very religious. Men kneel on the steps outside the churches. With two galleries all around, Notre Dame will seat 10,000 people, and at times thousands stand. In the old church of Bonsecours lamps in the form of ships are hung. Some are ancient galleasses, some brigantines, some modern screw steamboats with proper boats hung to their davits.—New York World.

Experience.

"We learn by experience," said the ready made philosopher. "That's true," remarked Mr. Grower. "We get a lot of information from experience, but it doesn't seem to help. What's the good of knowing what the weather was day before yesterday?"—Washington Star.

Psychological Fire.

My aunt told me to go tell the maid to make a fire in the kitchen stove, as we had no fire in the other part of the house. I did, and a few moments later went to the kitchen. Holding my hands over the stove, I said, "My, how nice and warm it is! It's heating up already." The maid lifted the stove lid and said, "I haven't made a fire yet."—Chicago Tribune.

Medical Advertising HOW FRENCH PEOPLE CURE STOMACH TROUBLE

A household remedy of the French peasantry, consisting of pure vegetable oil, and said to possess wonderful merit in the treatment of stomach, liver and intestinal troubles, has been introduced in this country by George H. Mayr, who for twenty years has been one of the leading down town druggists of Chicago and who himself was cured by its use. So quick and effective is its action that a single dose is usually enough to bring pronounced relief in the most stubborn cases, and many people who have tried it declare they never heard of anything to produce such remarkable results in so short a time. It is known as Mayr's Wonderful Stomach Remedy and can now be had at almost any drug store. It is now sold here by PEOPLE'S DRUG STORE.

The Adventures of Kathlyn

By HAROLD MAC GRATH

Illustrated by Pictures from the Moving Picture Production of the Selig Polyscope Co.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I—Kathlyn Hare, believing her father, Colonel Hare, is dead, has come to him in California to go to him in Allah, India. Umballa, pretender to the throne, has imprisoned the colonel, named by the late king as his heir.

CHAPTER II—Arriving in Allah, Kathlyn is informed by Umballa that her father being dead she is to be queen, and must marry him. She refuses and is informed by the priests that no woman can rule unmarried. She is given seven days to think it over.

CHAPTER III—She still refuses and is told that she must undergo two ordeals with wild beasts. If she survives she will be permitted to rule.

CHAPTER IV—John Bruce, an American, saves her life.

CHAPTER V—The elephant which carries her from the scene of her trials runs away, separating her from Bruce and the rest of the party.

CHAPTER VI—She takes refuge in a ruined temple, but this has been the abode of a lion and she is forced to flee from it.

CHAPTER VII—She finds a retreat in the jungle, only to fall into the hands of cave traders.

CHAPTER VIII—Kathlyn is brought to the public mart in Allah and sold to Umballa, who, finding her still unmanageable, throws her into the dungeon with her father.

CHAPTER IX—She is rescued by Bruce and his friends.

CHAPTER X—Colonel Hare also is rescued. Umballa, with soldiers, starts in pursuit. Kathlyn is struck by a bullet.

CHAPTER XI—The fugitives are given shelter in the palace of Bala Khan.

CHAPTER XII—Supplied by camels by the hospitable prince they start for the coast, but are captured by brigands. Umballa journeys to the lair of the bandits, makes the colonel a prisoner and orders Bruce and Kathlyn killed.

CHAPTER XIII—The bandits quarrel over the money paid them by Umballa and during the confusion Kathlyn and Bruce escape and return to Allah. They connect a plan to rescue the colonel.

CHAPTER XIV—The colonel is nominally king, but really a prisoner. It is arranged to find a bride for him. Kathlyn gains access to the palace in disguise, and her rescue plans are succeeding when the treasury leopards escape throwing the court into confusion.

CHAPTER XV—During the panic Ramabai and Bruce rescue Kathlyn and her father, and the party steals away from Allah.

CHAPTER XVI—The colonel hears that his younger daughter, Winnie, is about to arrive in Allah. The party journeys back to Allah. Winnie arrives before they do and walks into the trap prepared for her by Umballa. Winnie is crowned queen. Kathlyn and her father attend in disguise and make their presence known.

CHAPTER XVII—Kathlyn, in disguise, gains admission to Winnie's room, but is discovered by Umballa, who orders that she be offered as a sacrifice to the god Jagannath. She is rescued by the colonel and his friends.

CHAPTER XVIII—Kathlyn, disguised as an animal trainer, takes part in a public exhibition, reveals her identity to the people and rescues her sister.

CHAPTER XIX—Kathlyn, Winnie, their father and Bruce find a hiding place in the house of Ramabai. The latter's wife, Pundita, is the lawful queen of Allah, and public sentiment in her favor is growing. The people at last weary of Umballa's misrule, rise against him, with Ramabai at their head and Bruce and the colonel fighting under him. The rebels at first are defeated, but Kathlyn's timely appearance inspires them and the tide turns in their favor.

CHAPTER XX—The arena lions escape and Kathlyn seeks safety in a deserted house. She is discovered by Umballa, who is fleeing with the rebels. Mad for revenge he sets fire to the house.

CHAPTER XXI—Escaping from that danger, poison next threatens, but a servant sacrifices himself and saves Kathlyn. Ramabai has long suspected that the real king did not die as was announced. With the assistance of Bruce and Hare he finds the king where he had been imprisoned by Umballa and escorts him to the palace.

CHAPTER XXII—Umballa sneaks back to the city, and, with the assistance of a woman of the harem, murders the old king. It is arranged to have Pundita crowned queen, but Umballa secures the support of the priesthood, returns to the palace with absolute power and imprisons Kathlyn, Winnie, Hare and Bruce.

CHAPTER XXIII.

A Woman Scorned.

There is an old saying in Rajput that woman and the four winds were born at the same time, of the same mother: blew hot, blew cold, balmily or tempestuously, from all points at once. Perhaps.

In the zenana of the royal palace there was a woman, tall, lithe, with a skin of ivory and roses and eyes as brown as the husk of a water chestnut. On her bare ankles were gem-encrusted anklets, on her arms bracelets of hammered gold, round her neck a rope of pearls and emeralds and rubies and sapphires. And still she was not happy.

From time to time her fingers strained at the roots of her glossy black hair and the whites of her great eyes glistened. She bit her lips to keep back the sobs crowding in her throat. She pressed her hands together so tightly that the little knuckles cracked.

"Al, al!" she wailed softly. She paced the confines of her chamber with slow step, with fast step; or leaned against the wall, her face hidden in her arms; or pressed her hot cheeks against the cool marble of the lattice.

Human nature is made up of contraries. Why, when we have had the courage coolly to plan murder, or to aid or suggest it, why must we be troubled with remorse? More than this, why must we battle against silly impulse to tell the first we meet what we have done? Remorse: what is it?

Now, this woman of the zenana believed not in the God of your fathers and mine. She was a pagan; her heaven and hell were ruled by a thousand gods, and her temples were filled with their images. Yet this thing remorse, was stabbing her with its hot needed, no torture devised by man could equal it.

She was the poor, foolish woman who loved Durga Ram; loved him as these wild Asiatic women love, from murder to the poisoned cup. Loved him, and knew that he loved her not, but used her for his own selfish ends. There you have it. Had he loved her, remorse never would have lifted its head or raised its voice. And again, had not Umballa sought the white woman, this butterfly of the harem might have died of old age without burdening her soul. Remorse is the result of a crime committed uselessly. Humanity is unchangeable, for all its variety of skins.

And here was this woman, wanting to tell some one!

Umballa had done a peculiar thing; he had not laid hand upon either Ramabai or Pundita. When asked the reason for this generosity toward a man who but recently put a price on his head, Umballa smiled and explained that Ramabai was not only broken politically, but was a religious outcast. It was happiness for such a person to die, so he preferred that Ramabai should live.

Secretly, however, Ramabai's revolutionary friends were still back of him, though they pretended to bow to the yoke of the priests.

So upon this day matters stood thus: the colonel, Kathlyn, Bruce and Winnie were prisoners again; Ahmed was in hiding; and Ramabai and his wife mocked by those who once had cheered them. The ingratitude of kings is as nothing when compared to the ingratitude of a people.

A most ridiculous country: to crown Kathlyn again (for the third time!) and then to lock her up! Next to superstition as a barrier to progress there stands custom. Everything one did must be done as some one else had done it; the initiative was still chained up in the temples, it belonged to the bald priests only.

But Umballa had made two mistakes: he should have permitted the white people to leave the country and given a silken cord to the chief eunuch to apply as directed. There are no written laws among the dark peoples that forbid the disposal of that chattel known as a woman of the harem, or zenana. There are certain customs that even the all powerful British raj must ignore.

The catafalque of the dead king rested upon the royal platform. Two troopers stood below; otherwise the platform was deserted. When Ramabai and Pundita arrived and mounted the platform to pay their last respects to a kindly man, the soldiers saluted gravely, even sorrowfully. Ramabai, for his courage, his honesty and justice, was their man; but they no longer dared serve him, since it would be at the expense of their own lives.

"My lord!" whispered Pundita, pressing Ramabai's hand. "Courage!" For Pundita understood the man at her side. Had he been honorless, she would this day be wearing a crown.

"Pundita, they hissed us as we passed."

"Not the soldiers, my lord."

"And this poor man! Pundita, he was murdered, and I am powerless to avenge him. It was Umballa; but what proof have I? None, none. Well, for me there is left but one thing: to leave Allah for good. We two shall go to some country where honor and kindness are not crimes but virtues."

"My lord, it is our new religion."

"And shall we hold to it and go, or repudiate it and stay?"

"I am my lord's chattel; but I should despise him if he took the base course."

"And so should I, flower of my heart!" Ramabai folded his arms and stared down moodily at the man who, had he lived, could have made Pundita his successor. "Pundita, I have not yet dared tell you all; but here, in the presence of death, truth will out. We cannot leave. Confiscation of property and death face us at every gate. No! Umballa proposes to crush me gradually and make my life a hell. No man who was my friend now dares receive me in his house. Worship is denied us, unless we worship in secret. There is one pathway open." He paused.

"And what is that, my lord?"

"To kneel in the temple and renounce our religion. Do we that, and we are free to leave Allah."

Pundita smiled. "My lord is not capable of so vile an act."

"No."

And hand in hand they stood before catafalque, forgetting everything but the perfect understanding between them.

"Al, al!"

It was but a murmur, and the two turned to witness the approach of the woman of the zenana. She flung herself down before the catafalque, passionately kissing the shroud. She leaned back and beat her breast and wailed. Ramabai was vastly puzzled over this demonstration. That a handsome young woman should wall over the corpse of an old man who had never been anything to her might have an interpretation far removed from sorrow. Always in sympathy, however, with those bowed with grief, Ramabai stooped and attempted to raise her.

She shrank from his touch, looked up, and for the first time seemed to be aware of his presence. Like a bubble under water, that which had been striving for utterance came to the surface. She snatched one of Ramabai's hands.

"Al, al! I am wretched, lord, wretched! There is hot lead in my heart and poison in my brain! I will confess, confess!"

Ramabai and Pundita gazed at each other, astonished.

"What is it? What do you wish to confess?" cried Ramabai quickly. Perhaps.

She clung to his hand. "They will order my death by the silken cord. I am afraid. Krishna fend for me!"

"What do you know?"

"His majesty was murdered!" she hissed.

"I know that," replied Ramabai, but who murdered him? who built that cage in the palanquin? Who put the tiger there? Who beat and overpowered the real bearers and confiscated their turbans? Speak, girl, and if you can prove these things, there will be no silken cord."

"But who will believe a poor woman of the zenana?"

"I will."

"But you cannot save me from the cord. They have taken away your power."

"And you shall give it back to me!"

"I?"

"Even so. Come with me now, to the temple."

"The temple?"

"Aye; where all the soldiers are, the priests . . . and Durga Ram!"

"Al, al! Durga Ram; it was he! And I helped him, thus: I secured permission to go into the bazaars. There an assault took place under the command of Durga Ram, and my bearers were made prisoners. Durga Ram, disguised as a bearer, himself freed the tiger which killed the king. Yes! To the temple! She who confesses in the temple, her person is sacred. It is the law, the law! I had forgotten! To the temple, my lord!"

Before the high tribunal of priests, before the unhappy Kathlyn, before the astonished Umballa, appeared Ramabai and Pundita, between them the young woman of the zenana, now almost dead with terror.

"Hold!" cried Ramabai when the soldiers started toward him to eject him from the temple.

"What!" said Umballa; "will you recant?"

"No, Durga Ram. I stand here before you all, an accuser! I know the law. Will you, wise and venerable priests; you men of Allah, you soldiers, serve a murderer? Will you, with a wave of his hands toward the priests, stand sponsor to the man who deliberately planned and executed the miserable death of our king? Shall it fly to Benares, this news that Allah permits itself to be ruled and bullied by a common murderer; a man without family, a liar and a cheat? Durga Ram, you slew the king; you turned upon the hand that had fed and clothed you and raised you to power. . . . Wait! Let this woman speak!"

A dramatic moment followed; a silence so tense that the fluttering wings of the doves in the high arches could be heard distinctly. Ramabai was a great politician. He had struck not only wisely but swiftly before his public. Had he come before the priests and Umballa alone, he would have died on the spot. But there was no way of covering up this accusation, so bold, direct; it would have to be investigated.

Upon her knees, her arms outstretched toward the scowling priests, the woman of the zenana tremblingly told her tale: how she had saved Umballa during the revolt; how she had secured him shelter with her sister, who was a dancer; how she had visited Umballa in his secret chamber; how he had confided to her his plans; how she had seen him with her own eyes become one of the fake bearers of the palanquin.

"The woman lies because I spurned her!" roared Umballa.

"Away with her!" cried the chief priest, inwardly cursing Umballa for when she knew so much. "Away with her!"

"The law!" the woman wailed. "The sanctity of the temple is mine!"

"Hold!" said Kathlyn, standing up. In her halting Hindustani she spoke: "I have something to say to you all. This woman tells the truth. Let her go unafraid. You, grave priests, have thrown your lot with Umballa. Listen. Have you not learned by this time that I am not a weak woman but a strong one? You have harried me and injured me and wronged me and set tortures for me, but here I stand, unharmed. This day I will have my revenge. My servant Ahmed has departed for the walled city of Bala Khan. He will return with Bala Khan and an army such as will flatten the city of Allah to the ground, and crows and vultures and tigers and jackals shall make these temples their abiding places, and men will forget Allah as they now forget the mighty Chitor." She swung round toward the priests.

"You have yourselves to thank. At a word from me, Bala Khan enters or stops at the outer wall. I have tried to escape you by what means I had at my command. Now it shall be war! War, famine, plague!"

Her young voice rang out sharp and clear, sending terror to all cowardly hearts, not least among these being those beating in the breasts of the priests.

"Now," speaking to the soldiers, "go liberate my father, my sister, and my husband-to-be; and woe to any who disobey me! For while I stand here I shall be a queen indeed! Peace; or war, famine, and the plague. Summon the executioner. Arrest Durga Ram. Strip him before my eyes of his every insignia of rank. He is a murderer. He shall go to the treadmill, there to slave till death. I have said it!"

Far in the rear of the cowed assemblage, near the doors, stood Ahmed, in his old guise of bhilsti, or water carrier. When he heard that beloved voice he felt the blood rush into his throat. Aye, they were right. Who but a goddess would have had at such a time an inspiration so great? But it gave him an idea, and he slipped away to complete it. Bala Khan should come in fact.

So he did not see Umballa upon his knees, whining for mercy, making futile promises, begging for liberty. The soldiers spat contemptuously as they seized him and dragged him off.

The priests conferred hastily. Bala Khan was a fierce Mohammedan, a ruthless soldier; his followers were without fear. The men of Allah might put up a good defense, but in the end they would be whelmed; and the gods of Hind would be cast out to make way for the prophet of Allah. This young woman with the white skin had for the nonce beaten them. Durga Ram had played the fool; between the two women, he had fallen. They had given him power, and he had let it slip through his fingers for the sake of reprisal where it was not needed. Let him go, then, to the treadmill; let them go through with him. He had played his game like a tyro. They must placate this young woman who the people believed was their queen, but who they knew was the plaything of politics and expediences.

The chief or high priest salaamed, and Kathlyn eyed him calmly, though her knees threatened to refuse support.

"Majesty, we bow to your will. Allah cannot hope to cope with Bala Khan's fierce hillmen. All we ask is that you abide with us till you have legally selected your successor."

"Who shall be Pundita," said Kathlyn resolutely.

The chief priest salaamed again. The movement cost him nothing. Once Bala Khan was back in his city and this white woman out of the country, he would undertake to deal with Ramabai and Pundita. He doubted Bala Khan would stir from his impregnable city on behalf of Ramabai.

The frail woman who loved Umballa raised her hands in supplication.

Kathlyn understood. She shook her head. Umballa should end his days in the treadmill; he should grind the people's corn. Nothing should stir her from this determination.

"Majesty, and what of me?" cried the unhappy woman, now filled with another kind of remorse.

"You shall return to the zenana for the present."

"Then I am not to die, majesty?"

"No."

"And Bala Khan?" inquired the priest.

"He shall stand prepared; that is all."

CZAR AND KAISER CLAIM VICTORIES

Germany Reports 30,000 Russ Captured in Prussia.

BIG BATTLE IN POLAND

St. Petersburg Dispatch Told of the Investment by Russians of Thorn, Graudenz and Lemborg.

Berlin, Sept. 1.—It was officially announced here that about 30,000 Russians had been taken prisoners by the Germans during the fighting in East Prussia, particularly at Ortelburg, Hohenstein and Tannenberg. They include many officers of high rank.
The German attack at these three points was across swamps and lakes.

Germans Claim Victory.
Berlin (by way of Amsterdam),
Sept. 1.—Count De Szogyeny-Marich, Austrian ambassador to Germany, announced that the Austro-Hungarian army had invaded Russian Poland, had defeated the Russians at Kraznik and threw them back upon Lublin.

"A decisive battle has been in progress for several days at Kraznik," he said, "and we have won. The enemy is retreating to Lublin."

"The Austrians are pursuing the Russians, who fought with desperation, and we also have taken up a strong position in front of Seamor."

"Losses on both sides have been severe, but the Russians have suffered more than the Austrians."

(This is at wide variance with the St. Petersburg version of the situation in Russian Poland.)

Russians Invest Four Cities.
St. Petersburg, Sept. 1.—Official announcement of the investment of the German cities of Konigsberg, Thorn and Graudenz and the Austrian stronghold of Lemborg was made by the Russian general staff.

"The invasion of East Prussia and Galicia continues with undiminished success," says a statement issued by the war office. "Heavy reinforcements have reached the German troops opposing our advance in East Prussia, but they have been unable to halt us."

"The Austrian troops we struck at Lublin were forced to withdraw from Russian Poland to support the forces striving to prevent us from capturing Lemberg. Around that city we are in complete control of the north, south and east. Several corps of Austrian troops are advancing from the west of Lemberg and our advance guards already have been in contact with their right and left wings, whose cavalry have been driven back upon their supports."

"After occupying Allenstein our troops are advancing rapidly upon Osterode, where the German reinforcements are concentrating."

(This conflicts with the German statement given out in Berlin that five Russian corps had been defeated near Altenstein.)

"Russian troops are pressing closely upon the Austrians, who were forced to withdraw from the province of Kielce, Radom and Lublin and have taken many prisoners."

"Fighting has been going on for almost a week in the province of Lublin, but though numerically superior to the forces first sent to oppose the Austrians were unable to make any important gain. The arrival of our fresh troops decided the issue."

LONDON WILD OVER WOUNDED

Arrival of 300 From Battlefield Made Occasion of Demonstration.
London, Sept. 1.—Three hundred British officers and men arrived from the continent and were given the reception of heroes.

All were suffering from wounds received while trying to stem the rush of the right flank of the German army through northern Belgium and north eastern France.

Men, women and children were alcrazed with patriotism. It was a great occasion. Nothing like it had been seen since the days of the Boer war.
The arrival of wounded, now coming in a steady stream, is bringing the war closer home and giving a close range glimpse of its grimness and seriousness.

Attempt to Wreck Troop Train.
Valcartier, Que., Sept. 1.—An attempt to wreck a troop train on the Canadian Northern, about ninety miles east of Montreal, by placing arson rails across the tracks, was made but failed. Running more than forty miles an hour, the train brushed the obstruction into the ditch and slowed down to a standstill a little further on.

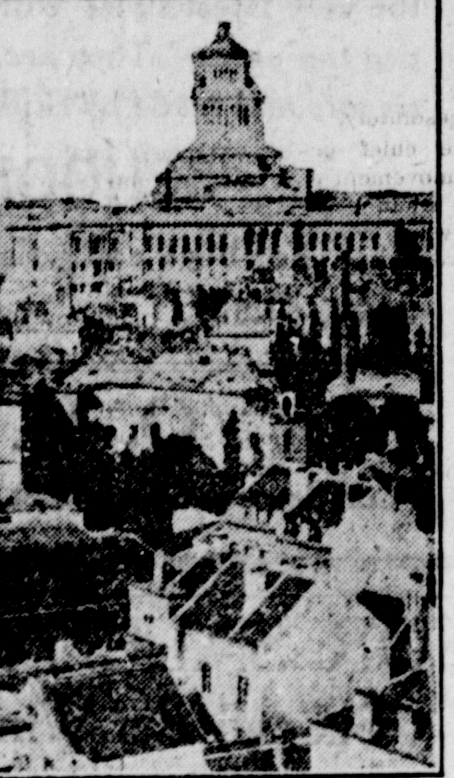

Earl of Plymouth's Son Hurt.
Cardiff, Wales, Sept. 1.—It is reported here that the Hon. Archibald Windsor Clive, second son of the Earl of Plymouth, who is a lieutenant in the Coldstream Guards was seriously wounded in the fighting at Mons.
Lieutenant Windsor Clive is twenty four years old.

TAX AMUSEMENT AND R. R. TICKETS

That is Plan Under Consideration by Congress.

Washington, Sept. 1.—A plan for a five or ten per cent war stamp tax on all railroad passenger tickets, theater tickets, base ball tickets and the like, is under consideration by members of the ways and means committee of the house.

The plan, calculated to raise annually from $50,000,000 to $80,000,000, originated in administration circles. The opinion among the Democrats of the committee is divided.

Some contend that a tax on beer and increased taxes on domestic wines and patent medicines, with an increase of one per cent in the income tax and a permanent inheritance tax would meet all the exigencies caused by the European war without being felt seriously by individuals.

No formal action has been taken.

TURKEY PREPARING FOR WAR

London Expects Hostilities Against Greece Any Moment.

London, Sept. 1.—The Daily Telegraph's diplomatic correspondent, in an article printed says:

"Turkey may declare war at any moment. It is now only a matter of a few days—possibly a few hours."

"All efforts of the powers in the Triple Entente have failed, and the London embassy admits the situation very grave. The military party now dominant in Constantinople has reached the conclusion that the present is the best time to secure the restoration of Macedonia and the Aegean Islands."

"German officers and men are being poured into Constantinople to help the Turkish army and navy. Turkey apparently counts on the Balkan states quarreling among themselves while Turkey fights Greece, but it seems likely that Turkey's declaration of war against Greece will be regarded as a hostile act by the Triple Entente, which will send a fleet to dispose of all the Turkish and German ships."

"The British government has warned Turkey plainly that in starting any campaign at this time she signs her own death warrant."

If Turkey declares war against Greece, Italy will declare war against Turkey, is the assertion made by the Paris Temps.

CONCERNING WHEAT.

Wheat is not a uniformly profitable crop. At least it does not compare favorably with the other leading crops—corn, hay, tobacco, cotton and alfalfa—if we accept the cost investigations of the United States department of agriculture at their face value.
Winter wheat continues to hold its own on the general farms of the eastern, central and northwestern states because of its peculiar fitness in the rotation and the fact that it can be grown without competing with other crops for the farmer's labor.

There is little question that at least half the total wheat crop of the country is produced with a very narrow margin of profit, and winter wheat may be regarded as a by-product of the farm rotation which in itself is not profitable, at least on most central and eastern farms. No yield of less than twenty bushels an acre can be regarded as a profitable crop when it is considered apart from the value of the growing wheat as a means of securing a stand of grass or clover or of utilizing land during the winter.—Country Gentleman.

SELECTING SEED CORN.

Early Selection From the Hill Has Important Advantages.

Hill selection of seed is urged by every institution interested in the improvement of corn. By selecting corn from the standing stalks in the field one can consider other things besides the ear itself. The height of the ear on the stalk and the strength of the stalk may both be considered, and whether or not the ear grew on a stalk that had the whole hill to itself or had to compete with two or three other stalks can be determined, while if one waits until the corn has been cut these factors cannot be considered.

While the large, heavy ears are desirable, one cannot profitably select them at the expense of maturity, because corn that will not mature is bound to be an unprofitable crop.
Early selection from the hill avoids the danger of the corn being injured by frost while it is still damp in the husk. It also allows for ample time for the corn to become thoroughly dried out before freezing weather, which is very important in maintaining a strong germination.—A. D. Wilson, Director of Agricultural Extension, University Farm, St. Paul.

Portable Stock Chute.

Every farmer has occasion to load some animals into a wagon, and many do this by building a stock chute.
Usually these chutes are built as permanent fixtures in connection with feed racks, but are often made so they can be taken from one part of the farm to another. When a chute of this kind is built heavy and strong enough to support the weight of a mature hog or a large calf it becomes a clumsy thing to move. An Indian farmer has solved this problem of inconvenience by placing his chute on a truck.

CHUTE ON A TRUCK.

wheels and axles used in making his chute were parts of old machinery found on the farm. The wheels were taken from an old mower. The short end of the chute is provided with two strong iron hooks which are sharpened so as to engage the bottom of the wagon bed and to prevent the chute slipping back when the animals start upward. With such an arrangement there is no difficulty in building a chute of ample strength because the question of weight is of small importance. The chute can be hooked on behind the wagon and hauled to any part of the farm.

SOME BEE WISDOM.

Beekeeping is fast becoming the business of the specialist, and the number of men who devote their entire attention to the business is rapidly increasing. However, there is no reason why the average farmer cannot keep a few colonies of bees to supply honey for home consumption, with perhaps some surplus for sale in good years.

In moving swarms of bees long distances as much care as possible should be taken to prevent sharp jars and bumping. This can perhaps be best prevented by crating with as much ex-cessor or other padding between the hives and outer casing as possible.

The United States department of agriculture attributes most of the reported decrease to the brood diseases of bees which are now found widely distributed in the United States. The department has knowledge of these diseases in about 20 per cent of all counties in the United States. Where disease exists beekeepers often lose colonies and attribute their loss to some other cause. Because of these facts the department advises persons interested in bees to inform themselves concerning these diseases. It is quite possible to keep bees with profit with diseases prevalent in the neighborhood provided the beekeeper knows how to treat the disease.

The Family Market Basket

These are sad days for the family market basket. Many events seem to have conspired to bring about higher prices, and the careful housewife must be wide awake to make ends meet.

She cannot afford to purchase haphazard.

She must have the best available information of products and prices.

In these days the advertising columns of a live newspaper like The Times are immensely valuable.

They are the public market place. They keep a woman informed as to the greatest purchasing power of her dollar.

The woman who uses newspaper advertising for her guide is more apt to get 100 cents plus for her dollar than her neighbor who shops haphazard.

Back From The Dead

By EDITH V. ROSS

"Oh, papa!" said Georgie Trevor. "What do you think?"

"What do I think? Why, I think my little boy looks very happy about something."

"I saw mamma in the park!"

A pained expression came over the father's face. His wife, the mother of the boy, had been dead a year. The child was at the time too young to understand the nature of death and had been told that his mother had gone away and would not come back to him. When the father recovered from the shock his son had given him he said:

"You were mistaken, Georgie. You couldn't have seen mamma, for she is in heaven."

"Yes, I did. While Nanny and I were walking in the park I saw mamma sitting on a bench by the fountain. I ran up to her and said, 'Oh, mamma, where have you been so long, and why don't you come home?'"

"And what did mamma say?"

"Why, she kissed me and said, 'I can't come to you, but you can come and see me at my home occasionally. Then I asked her where that was and she said, 'I'll tell your nurse, and she can bring you.'"

The father took his boy in his arms, kissed him and, putting him down, sent for the nurse and questioned her. She told him that the lady Georgie had referred to was the image of his lost wife; that she had humored the boy and had given her address, at the same time telling her that she might bring him to see her if she found he was longing for her.

The next day Georgie asked to be taken to see his "mamma," and the nurse, having referred the matter to his father and received his assent, took the child to see the lady, Miss Marian Hill, who petted him and gave him candy and sent him home loaded with favors. Many times during his visit she was about to explain to him that she was not his mother, that he had made a mistake, but that he might consider her as such, and she would love him the same as if she were so, but the child seemed so sure about her identity, and it was evident that she would only pain him by setting him right, so she could not bring herself to correct his error.

"Why don't you come home, mamma, and see papa? He looks so sorry because you went away!"

Miss Hill found it more difficult to parry this part of the error than any of the others. However, she was no prude and yielded to the necessities of the case. Her heart was touched by the motherless boy, and she placed his comfort above all else.

"You can bring papa to see me if you like," she said.

"And then will you come home with us?"

The lady kissed him and said that she couldn't do that, and she couldn't explain to him why, but doubtless his father would understand.

So when Georgie's father came home that evening the boy told him that mamma couldn't come home to see him, but he could go to see her.

One afternoon Mr. Trevor made a call on Miss Hill. He was struck with her likeness to his lost wife and was not surprised that Georgie had mistaken her for his mother.

"I would have brought Georgie with me," he said, "but thought that we had better first arrange what we should tell him to satisfy him, that our stories may not disagree."

"I fear that I shall have to rely on you to tell him that I am not his mother. I fear I have not the heart to do so."

"I will think the matter over. There is no need for haste. I am not sure that we could make him understand his mistake even if we tried to do so. For the present we may permit him to remain in ignorance."

Miss Hill made no reply to this. She knew that it would be embarrassing for the child to continue in supposing that she was his mamma, living in another home than theirs. Mr. Trevor also realized this, but he had thought of a remedy. The moment he saw Miss Hill he was seized with a desire that she should fill the gap left by the wife he had lost. Indeed, from the time he thought of this possibility he became a different man. Being a widower, he knew how to lay siege to a woman's heart and realized that his motherless child had opened a way for him. When he arose to leave after his first call he had formed a definite purpose that would bring him a companion and his boy a mother.

He began by sending trifling gifts by Georgie when he went with his nurse to see his mamma, principally flowers and books, following up these by invitations, which at first were such as might include Georgie. From this he stepped to invitations and gifts of such frequency that his ultimate intentions were obvious.

One day he made his boy dance for joy by telling him that "mamma" was coming home.

"I knew she would come some time!" cried the child, clapping his hands. "When is she coming?"

"Papa is going to take her for a short journey, and when we come back she will be here all the time."

Georgie never knew but that he had found his mother, who for some unaccountable reason had gone away, but had come back to him.

Is Less Expensive.

It does not take as much to feed a woman as a man, the scientists say, and the average woman does not spend as much for her clothes as the average man.

The Garden Webworm.

Reports that the garden webworm is seriously injuring alfalfa have been received by George A. Dean, entomologist of the Kansas State Agricultural college and experiment station. This insect has several times been found a serious enemy to alfalfa in Kansas. It may also attack corn and garden truck. The complete life cycle of the moth occupies about a month in mid summer, and in Kansas there are three or four generations a year. The eggs are laid on the food plant, and when they hatch the worms begin feeding and spin a fine web, which gradually envelops the plant.

The trouble is not usually noticed, Professor Dean says, until the plants are seriously injured. As soon as it is observed the alfalfa should be cut in order that as much of it as possible may be saved for hay. If it is full of the web and the droppings of the worms it should not be fed to horses, but may be fed to cattle. The larvae feed normally on the pigweed, and the plowing of infested weed fields in late autumn or winter and thorough disk ing of alfalfa will largely control the pest. On garden crops it may be destroyed by spraying or dusting with paris green or lead arsenate.

Impossible Illustration.

Examined on history at West Point, Whistler failed to recall the date of the battle of Buena Vista. "Suppose," said the exasperated instructor, "you were to go to dinner and the company began to talk of the Mexican war, and you, a West Point man, were asked the date of the battle; what would you do?" "Do?" was the reply. "Why, I should refuse to associate with people who could talk of such things at dinner!"
